From the London Times of Sept. 29th. The San Juan Island Trouble.

We are so accustomed to territorial disputes with the American people, in which Englishmen can hardly be OR MAKING SOAP WITHOUT LIME, with little trouble | brought to take an interest, while their adversaries give and at trifling expense. The cheapest article ever dis- play to all the excitement peculiar to them, that we can perhaps the American Government, will judge of the course most advantageous to themselves by the tone of public opinion in England. It is to be feared that the people of this country, immersed in the vortex of European politics, will treat the San Juan question as they have treated many others, and that the Cabinet of Washington will find the apathy of British opinion an excellent ally in dealing with a British Minister. It is with no wish to sow dissension between kindred nations, or to be wanting in that courtesy which characterizes different Railroads, as well as for those depart- modern politics, that we express a hope that on this question the Government of Great Britain will be found true to itself and to those hardy and trusting adventurflag, have spread themselves over the globe. The evidence, to our thinking, inclines strongly in favor prominent abolitionists at the North and West, as being of England. There can be no doubt that the "channel," which was used in 1846, the period of the treaty, was one which placed the island under the dominion of Great Britain. The claim of the Americans arises from the fact that since that time another channel has been used by steamers, and has become equally well known with measurement and legal interpretation have failed. We have yielded more than we ought on many American questions, simply because the public opinion of the country Galveston, laden with cattle consigned to Messrs. But there has probably never yet been an instance of a spot in dispute betwen the two nations which has been violently seized by one of them on the sole responsibility of an inferior officer.
